

Academic Handbook

The academic handbook provides general guidance for undergraduate students. It covers academic planning, course registration, assessment, student responsibilities, and common academic procedures.

A semester normally consists of a defined set of courses and academic activities. Students should review the approved curriculum and register for the courses applicable to their programme and semester.

Students are responsible for checking official notices, academic schedules, course information, and deadlines communicated through approved institutional channels.

Assessment

Assessment may include internal or continuous evaluation, laboratory or practical work, assignments, quizzes, projects, and end-semester examinations, depending on the course.

Students should complete academic work within the deadlines specified by the course instructor or department. Missing a deadline may affect the student's assessment according to the applicable course rules.

The exact assessment pattern, marks distribution, and examination requirements are determined by the approved curriculum and the rules applicable to the programme.

Student Responsibilities

Students are expected to maintain academic integrity and submit their own work. They should acknowledge sources when required and avoid unauthorized copying or other forms of academic misconduct.

Students should maintain regular communication with their faculty members and department regarding academic requirements, deadlines, and difficulties affecting their studies.

The handbook provides general guidance and should be used together with official regulations, circulars, and notices issued by the institution.
