

Attendance Policy

The purpose of this policy is to define attendance requirements for undergraduate students. Regular attendance helps students participate effectively in lectures, tutorials, laboratory sessions, and academic activities.

Students are expected to maintain a minimum attendance of 75 percent in each course during the semester. Attendance is calculated using the number of sessions attended divided by the total number of sessions conducted.

For example, if 40 classes are conducted and a student attends 32 classes, the attendance is 80 percent. Attendance percentages are normally calculated separately for each course.

Leave and Attendance

Students who are absent because of approved reasons should submit the required leave or supporting documents according to the academic office procedure. Approval of leave does not automatically mean that attendance requirements are waived.

Students whose attendance falls below the required minimum may be required to submit an explanation to the department. The department may apply the academic rules applicable to shortage of attendance.

Students should regularly check their attendance records and report any suspected errors to the concerned faculty member within the period specified by the department.

Attendance Records

Faculty members maintain attendance records for their courses. Students may review their attendance through the academic information system when the record is made available.

Attendance for laboratory sessions is recorded separately where applicable. Students should attend scheduled laboratory sessions and complete required practical work.

The attendance policy should be read together with the institution's academic regulations and examination rules. In case of a conflict, the official academic regulations applicable to the student's programme will be followed.
